

Senior Interior Designer

City of London

£75,000 - £90,000 per annum + comms

What You'll Do

You lead the design on workplace fit out projects typically valued between £1M and £5M, taking responsibility for both the creative direction and the technical development of schemes from concept through to delivery. Your role is central to how each project looks, feels and functions, and you remain closely involved throughout.

You develop designs in Revit and AutoCAD, producing coordinated, buildable information while protecting the original design intent. You deal directly with clients, leading presentations, guiding decisions and ensuring they always feel informed and in control. Internally, you work closely with project managers, commercial teams and site colleagues to make sure the design translates smoothly into reality.

You bring structure and leadership to the design process, keeping programmes, information and decisions aligned. You also act as a senior presence within the team, setting standards and supporting less experienced designers in both studio and client settings.

What You'll Get

You earn between £75,000 and £90,000 plus commission linked to the gross profit of the projects you help deliver, so your contribution is reflected in your earnings. The projects are high value, high visibility workplace schemes that strengthen your portfolio and professional standing.

You join a business with significant presence in the workplace sector, providing consistent workflow and access to well regarded clients. The culture is straightforward and grown up, with trust placed in experienced people to manage their responsibilities properly. Strong performance opens doors as the company continues to expand, giving you room to step forward in your career rather than stand still.

What You'll Need

You have solid experience as a senior interior designer within a workplace design and build environment. You are proficient in Revit and AutoCAD and understand how to produce information that works on site as well as on paper.

You are confident managing clients and stakeholders, keeping communication clear and projects organised. You are comfortable balancing design quality with budgets, programmes and practical constraints, particularly on projects in the £1M to £5M range.

You are able to work from a central London office on a full time basis and stay close to your projects.

About the Company

You would be joining a well established workplace design and build contractor with a substantial turnover and an international presence. The business delivers a wide range of office fit out projects and is structured into specialist teams, including a long standing division focused on larger design and build schemes for prominent clients.
