

Senior Project Manager

Salary: £80,000–£100,000 plus package

Location: London

Vacancy ID: 010132

You'll lead the delivery of multiple design and build workplace projects between £1M and £4M in London, owning them from contract award through to completion. You'll manage programme, commercial outcomes, procurement, design coordination, client relationships, professional teams and site delivery standards. You'll be responsible for the financial performance of your projects, steering cost plans, variations, trade procurement, package management, forecasting and margin protection with precision and confidence. You won't be a passenger in the process; you'll be the person the project leans on when decisions need to be made quickly and correctly, particularly where design meets cost, compliance meets delivery, and intent meets buildability.

You'll run more than one project at a time, because that's how respected London-based design and build contractors deliver work and how you operate at your best. The structure allows you to focus on doing, not waiting. You'll lead subcontractor engagement, negotiate scopes, control budgets, review commercial risk, present technical and commercial updates to clients and directors, and maintain delivery discipline on site. You'll influence quality, pace, safety, commercial clarity and client confidence across every job you lead.

What You'll Get

You'll be joining the workplace delivery division of a respected London-based design and build contractor specialising in commercial interiors. The environment here is calm, credible, collaborative and designed to keep you clear-headed and properly supported while you deliver at a senior level. Directors will give you room to run your projects your way, trusting your judgement rather than policing your process. The culture protects your wellbeing, respects your time, and rewards you with a package that reflects your seniority and commercial responsibility. You'll lead award-winning work, influence delivery outcomes, and feel trusted to operate independently.

What You'll Need

You'll be an experienced PM, selective and organised, bringing a track record of running your own multiple projects in the commercial interiors sector. You'll know design and build workplace delivery, or traditional fit-out project leadership, with a demonstrable history of owning commercials, protecting margin, managing risk, negotiating variations, steering procurement, coordinating design intent and ensuring buildability on site. You'll be someone who enjoys being trusted to lead without micro-management, able to communicate with directors, clients and professional teams with clarity, confidence and commercial rigour. You'll know how to influence outcomes without noise, build credibility without hype, and deliver award-winning work without needing permission for every decision.

About the Company

This is a respected London-based £100M design and build contractor specialising in bespoke, high-performing office environments. They deliver commercial interiors through agile delivery teams, with award-winning projects forming part of their identity. The culture is grown-up, collaborative and stable, with leadership teams who trust delivery professionals to lead without excessive process friction.
