

Lead Pitch Designer
£100,000 - £120,000 + Package
Central London

What You'll Do

You will lead the creative direction on some of the most prestigious workplace projects in central London, shaping the concepts that win work and set the tone for delivery. In this Lead Pitch Designer role, you are responsible for defining the narrative, spatial thinking and overall design vision that secures client buy in on schemes typically valued between £3m and £12m.

Working at the front end of major design and build opportunities within a dedicated enterprise level team, you will develop compelling, commercially aware concepts that respond clearly to complex briefs. From early strategy and mood through to client presentation, you guide the process and give clients confidence in both the ambition and practicality of the design direction.

You are not working in isolation. A structured team of intermediate, junior and technical designers supports you, helping to translate your ideas into well resolved material. This allows you to focus on creative leadership, big picture thinking and client engagement rather than pure production. You will also collaborate closely with pre construction, commercial and delivery specialists so that your concepts remain grounded in buildability.

Your contribution carries real influence. The work you produce directly affects which projects the business secures and how it is viewed in the market. You will be seen internally as a senior creative figure, helping to set standards and raise the quality of thinking across major pursuits.

What You'll Get

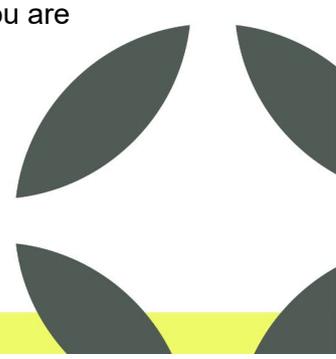

You will receive a £100,000 to £120,000 salary with commission that is likely to fall in the £30,000 to £40,000 range each year. Just as importantly, you gain access to high profile, design led workplace projects that add weight to your portfolio and keep your work at the forefront of the London market.

You join an organisation with a recognised brand and strong market presence, which supports you when engaging with demanding clients. Internally, there is genuine resource behind you. Capable designers and technical specialists provide the depth needed to deliver at this level.

Your base is a high quality studio environment in Wimbledon, a short walk from the station, offering a professional and collaborative setting that reflects the senior nature of the role.

What You'll Need

You will bring a consistent track record of operating at the top end of the design and build sector, ideally with tier one contractors known for complex, design led projects. You are comfortable leading pitch design on large value schemes and presenting your ideas with authority.

You combine strong creative instinct with commercial awareness, understanding how to inspire clients while keeping proposals realistic. You are used to directing more junior designers and coordinating with technical teams to produce coherent, persuasive material. You take pride in work that stands out in a competitive environment.

About the Company

You will join an established London based design and build contractor with around three decades of experience and annual turnover of roughly £80m. The business focuses on high quality, design led workplace environments for major occupiers and has built a reputation for thoughtful, well executed projects.

The studio is based in a privately owned, multi floor office building in Wimbledon, close to the station. The team you join handles the largest and most complex schemes in the organisation, giving you exposure to significant projects within a structured and well supported business.
