

Senior Technical Designer

City of London

£70,000 to £80,000 + package + bonus

Vacancy ID: 010139

You are already trusted to deliver technically complex projects. This role gives you the scale, backing and project profile to do it at a higher level, with proper support around you. You will work on prestigious workplace fit outs in London, within a business known for its standing in the market, while being treated like a professional in a mature, no-drama culture. As the company continues to grow, so do the opportunities to step up.

What You'll Do

You will take ownership of the technical design process on design and build workplace projects, from developed design through to construction information and site support. You will lead the production and coordination of detailed drawing packages in Revit and AutoCAD, ensuring that design intent is translated into accurate, buildable information. You will review layouts, details, junctions and specifications, resolving clashes and technical risks before they become site issues.

Working closely with designers, project managers and commercial teams, you will help shape practical solutions that protect programme, cost and quality. You will speak directly with subcontractors and suppliers to agree details, review workshop drawings and ensure technical compliance.

You will attend site when required, reviewing installations, answering technical queries and helping the team solve problems in real time. You will manage design changes, track revisions and maintain control of drawing issue status. You will also support building regulations, landlord and statutory approvals, and ensure documentation aligns with required standards.

As a senior figure, you will contribute to internal technical standards, mentor less experienced team members and help raise the overall quality of technical delivery.

What You'll Get

You will receive a strong salary and bonus within a business that has real weight in the workplace fit out sector. You will work on high quality, high visibility projects that add credibility to your CV.

The culture is grown up and collaborative. You are trusted to get on with your job without unnecessary politics or micromanagement. As the company continues to expand, there is genuine scope to progress into more senior technical or design management roles. You will be based in the City of London, close to major transport links, working alongside experienced teams across design, commercial and delivery.

What You'll Need

You will be an experienced Technical Designer within workplace design and build or commercial fit out.

You must be confident producing and coordinating detailed information in Revit and AutoCAD. You are known for your ability to problem solve, take ownership and see issues through to resolution rather than passing them on.

You are comfortable speaking with subcontractors, consultants and site teams, and you are willing to visit site to review works and resolve technical queries. You work in a collaborative, straightforward way and build good working relationships with colleagues and stakeholders.

About the Company

You will be joining an established workplace design and build contractor with a strong presence in London and an international reach. The business operates multiple project teams alongside specialist fit out capabilities, delivering high quality workplace environments for a broad client base.

Design is central to how the company works. The creative, interior and technical design teams sit together in the office, encouraging daily collaboration, quick problem solving and a shared sense of ownership over projects. You are not working in isolation. You are part of an integrated design group where ideas, details and technical challenges are discussed openly and constructively.

The company actively supports this collaborative approach. Every two weeks, the wider team comes together for a town hall session where live projects are presented, lessons are shared and new ideas are explored. This keeps the focus firmly on remaining a design led contractor, with strong creative, interior and technical design disciplines working in balance.

You will be surrounded by experienced designers and delivery professionals who care about the quality of what they produce and who value straightforward communication, teamwork and mutual respect.
