

Technical Services Manager

Salary: £80,000–£120,000+ plus package

Location: London (Hybrid, one day a week)

Vacancy ID: 010126

What You'll Do

This role gives you the part of the process most Technical Services Managers enjoy the most: the front end. You'll be integral to pre-construction in the traditional workplace division of a respected London based design and build contractor. Your focus will be interrogating designs rather than simply coordinating them. You'll work with M&E consultants, architects, and professional teams, asking the questions others often don't have the engineering depth to raise. You'll solve engineering problems before they become programme problems, influencing bid quality, delivery standards, and technical decision-making across live workplace projects.

You won't be stepping into a siloed back-office function. You'll shape mid-bids, lead tender interviews for M&E, and provide the technical narrative that supports both winning and delivering complex workplace fit-outs. You'll test assumptions, validate buildability, and steer M&E strategy in bids. The impact you make in one room, at one table, will carry through the lifecycle of projects, because you helped form them.

What You'll Get

This contractor has scaled by trusting technical professionals to make the right calls. You'll have hybrid flexibility (one day a week from home), a clear promotion runway as the division grows, and a culture that feels grown-up rather than frantic. The business operates like a challenger brand within a stable, well-resourced contractor. You'll be somewhere that backs your judgement, gives you room to influence outcomes, and offers a genuine step forward, not sideways.

You'll see a salary that reflects your seniority, a benefits package that supports you properly, and a process where your technical voice carries real influence in the team.

What You'll Need

You bring solid experience in design-and-build workplace fit-out, or traditional fit-out with a strong M&E interview and bid leadership track record. You know how to interrogate design with engineering rigour, lead tender interviews for M&E, and work alongside professional teams in a way that improves bid quality and delivery outcomes. You can challenge constructively, solve technical problems early, and communicate those solutions clearly in bid environments.

About the Company

You'll be joining the traditional workplace division of an established London design and build contractor operating across commercial interiors. Projects are professional-team led and technically rigorous, typically ranging up to £10M, with CAT B workplace schemes forming the core of their pipeline. It's a grown-up culture where your technical voice will genuinely influence outcomes, and the division is scaling with a clear promotion runway for the right technical leader.
